

End-to-end encryption

The message is encrypted with a so-called "public key".

The message is decrypted with a so-called "private key".

Any outgoing/incoming messages are either automatically encrypted, or one needs a key to decrypt them. Either way, nothing on the server is stored there as plain text, which means, your information can not be easily read.